

with men. Nor is it only in the gardens of literature that the advancing education of woman bears fruit. We find it in every domain of art. In sculpture the young American Miss Hosmer is eminent; in painting Rosa Bonheur is paramount when she opens to our view a rich pasturage with cattle grazing, or wild moors with the mottled deer trooping across them, or great horse fairs with sturdy men buying and selling, and bright suns and deep blue skies shedding their radiance over all. But still it remains a fact, that the proportion of successful endeavor is smaller amongst women than men, and that very few women have shown themselves capable of a long-sustained effort; so that when they appeared ten years ago a work of fiction in three volumes, called "Adam Bede," wherein there was no faltering chapter, which contained an equal combination of vigor and beauty, and sagacity, and subtle observation, the world at large attributed the production to a man. It was thought by many critics that a performance so unwavering in its strength could not proceed from a feminine hand. But those critics were mistaken. It was a woman who wrote "Adam Bede," and the force and delicacy of touch, the profound and extensive knowledge of the humors and passions of mankind, of all nature, of art and science, of history, of times presents and past, of all, in short, that men most wish to know—these rare qualities, first recognized in "Adam Bede," were developed to the reader in fuller perfection in every succeeding volume from the same author. ### A Chapter on Smuggling.

The business of smuggling keeps pace with other risks generally and will probably continue across the borders while Canada endures. Within the last few days we are informed that it has broken out afresh, notwithstanding the heavy fines and penalties that have been visited upon great numbers for this offence, recently. One lady now residing in this town, but a few days since, lost a valuable set of sable furs worth not less than $200, which she had imprudently secreted and brought out on the cars and past the Custom House here, without reporting the same. Another lady passenger was relieved at the Custom House last evening of a weighty burden of silks and laces which had become fastened to the inside of her Crinoline. A gentleman at about the same time suffered a collapse of the chest, by the removal of a valuable Mink Muff from the inside of his vest. Quite recently a broker in Boston had his trunk returned to the United States vouched for by an officer of the Canadian Customs as being in the same condition as it went into Canada, but upon being opened at the Custom House, was found to contain a large quantity of silks and other new goods. Another gentleman out on the cars yesterday, notwithstanding he had been advised by the officer on the train to call at the Custom House on his arrival, and pay duties on a valuable tibet shawl, intentionally forgot to do it and the consequence was that he lost it down the road—a loss of about $125. Another passenger yesterday, mistated the contents of his trunk and denied that he had any new goods in it while at St. Albans, and before he arrived at Burlington he was minus 40 yards of dress silk nicely sewed in a sack, and in his trunk. Ordinarily we should suppose that travellers would take warning, but they do not.

These travelers, when they have gotten themselves into trouble, often relate how they have been advised to this course by the Merchants of Montreal, who have invariably assured them that there would be no trouble, and even go so far in their assurances as to furnish sacks and private rooms for the party to regale themselves. This don't help the matter, the party is "in for it" every time when they are caught. The most that the Montreal Merchant cares about it, is to find buyers for his goods, and the money which is to be paid for them. Many times, no doubt the smuggler is innocent before the fact, but often takes his chances with his eyes wide open. Men and women who should be considered above yielding themselves to carry on this clandestine traffic, are still pursuing this avocation. There is something in it enticing, bewitching, and people who otherwise are considered respectable, love to take their chances. Men take their chances at Faro, poker and "bluff," and women have been known to engage in games of chance as well. Although betting is a crime against the civil laws; men who consider themselves good men do bet on cards, horses, elections and almost every thing else. Men engage in gold speculations, or in buying stocks, and then resort to all means in their power good or bad, to influence the markets up or down, as best shall serve their purposes. It is all a mania for taking risks in order to obtain wealth or to satisfy an unholy ambition, and while this disposition of the American people seems to increase rather than diminish, smuggling will continue.

In order to collect the revenue on imports, importations must be legitimate, and clandestine importations must be prevented. Every one can see the necessity for the execution of the laws and the enforcement of fines and penalties, but do they?

Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention.

A circular, a copy of which may be found in our columns, has been issued from the headquarters of the Soldiers' and Sailors' National Republican Executive Committee at Washington, D. C., calling a grand Mass Convention, to be held at Philadelphia, on the 1st and 2nd days of October. Without considering what effect such a Convention is intended to exercise upon the Presidential campaign, we think such meetings of the late soldiers and sailors of the Union to be commended for general and sufficient reasons. It is wise and proper that the old esprit which made armed patriots invincible should be cherished and renewed in such gatherings. They dissipate the merely local tendencies of patriotism, and broaden the perceptions of those engaged in them, and thus extend the base of patriotic feeling—a feeling which begins, like charity, at home, and which, like charity, should not be permitted to terminate there. Such meetings also offer chances for renewal of old acquaintances, and recall through their accompanying reminiscences, the scenes through which the defenders of the country passed, and, if the sacrifices they made were hearty and earnest, and not merely conventional, tend to strengthen the old love which blazed through the smoke of a hundred battle-fields like a pillar of fire, and mingled with the cloud that accompanied each weary march, and to renew in its vigor the devotion of a large number of men, scattered all over the land, to the cause of the country, and against the disunion tendencies which are again exhibiting themselves so strongly, even in the platform and candidate of a formidable party organization. The Republican party, to which most of the late soldiers of the Union army belong (living or dead, we had almost said), is accused of being sectional or revolutionary. So it was before it saved the Union from dissolution. The soldiers appreciate the source from which these charges come. They recognize the old enemy, and to a great extent, the old enemy. Let them rally when such notes of discord, hate, and defiance are sounded as ring in every bugle note of that party whose leaders represent the strength of the "lost cause." Let them judge together of the present by the past, of which they know so much and so well. Let them renew together the old feelings of devotion to the country and determination to fight it out, by ballot or by bullet, as the right and the safety of the country may demand, until peace comes—not in the way dictated by those who proved hostile to Union, but in the way which shall best preserve and perpetuate the Free Union under its Free Constitution.

And when the Convention of Union soldiers and sailors shall adjourn, with three cheers for the most successful Union General, the citizens of Philadelphia, who hold traditions of the Declaration of Independence, need not fear that they will recognize, as did the citizens of New York, not long since, "the rebel yell."

THIEVING VERMONT.—The following specimen of choice literature, comes from the Copperhead Monster who runs the Council Bluffs (Iowa) Democrat. If "Brick" Pomeroy would further increase the circulation of his paper, he should secure the services of this fellow by all means; hear him.

Keep it in mind that the "loyal" people of Vermont, whose houses are bedecked with the stolen plunder of Southern homes, whose wives and daughters are clothed in stolen finery from Southern ladies, and whose hearts are filled with the same hate of Republican Government which their fathers felt, are the same tribe who slunk back in the bush, or hid amongst mountains, to fire upon our "rebel forefathers" for the glory of George the Third, King of England, for whom they professed and practiced the same loyalty they now practice! O ye generations of vipers!

The traitor of 1812, who held aloof from the second war of American Independence, refusing to furnish a man or dollar, who gained a victory in the three acre onion bed of the East, otherwise, Vermont! Bring out the gong! Play the hugg! O ye hypocrites and knaves!

The Dutch have taken Holland, and the Yankees have carried Vermont, "Neouw, dew tell!" "Wall, I swear!"

the hands of District Attorney Courtney. The circumstances of the affair, according to the Advertiser's Washington correspondent, were as follows:

Binckley has been treating all the government attorneys and lawyers in a very lordly style, presuming on the President's letter of authority. Yesterday he sent for District Attorney Courtney to come to his room at the Astor House. When Courtney arrived Binckley's first question was: "Well, sir, which side are you going to take in this case tomorrow?" To this insult Mr. Courtney replied by informing Mr. Binckley in a forcible manner that he was a consummate fool, and that he (Courtney) would have nothing more to do with him, and turned to leave. Binckley jumped up and undertook to slam the door so as to prevent Mr. Courtney from leaving. In this operation he shut Mr. Courtney in between the door and door-frame. At this, Mr. Courtney upset Binckley, pushed him over on a lounge and pummeled him, until he roared for help. This brought some of Binckley's force to the rescue, and he was saved to deliver more opinions. Through these attendants the details leaked out.

Thieves and Pick-Pockets.

The Burlington Times of yesterday morning says:

The thieves and pick-pockets did a "land office" business yesterday, despite the efforts of Boston detectives and home police. A large number of individuals, simple and talented, met with depletion of purses and pocket-books. The more serious sufferers were Joseph Denny of Northfield, whose wallet disappeared with a considerable sum, and Mrs. Hyatt of this city, whose pocket was rifled of a portmanteau, containing $14, a gold clasp and a silver fruit-knife. Hon. Josiah Tuttle of Essex, was relieved at the Junction of $175 in greenbacks and a wallet containing valuable papers, and a daughter of Dr. Wm. Russell of Middlebury, had her pocket picked in the Rutland depot, of $50. It is evident that a clam of professional rogues have reaped a harvest in our city for the last few days. Marshal Flanagan warned the crowd in Floral Hall during the forenoon, of the "light-fingered gentry," when several elegantly-dressed gentlemen at once had business elsewhere. No arrests have been made, however, to our knowledge.

Since writing the above, we learn that just before the 8:25 train for the East left the Vt. Central depot last evening a pick-pocket went through the train abstracting quite a sum of money. The robbed man took his seat in the cars, but soon he felt the rascal "going" for his pocket, when he gobbled him by the gullet. The fellow screamed for help, when the passengers, not knowing the cause of the disturbance, interfered and let up the thief. He at once jumped through the car window, and the police, who had been sent for, are as yet unable to arrest him.

To the foregoing may be added the name of John K. Montague, of Fletcher, who was quietly relieved of $20, while changing cars at Essex Junction Thursday evening.

The Expulsion of the Colored Representatives of Georgia.

Further details respecting this transaction only aggravate its high-handed character. It was required by no law on the statute book of Georgia, and is in plain contravention of the amended Constitution of the United States. It is the more discreditable to the Democratic members of the Georgia Legislature, from the fact that about thirty of their own members, who might have been expelled for complicity in the rebellion, were, in the early part of the session, generously admitted to their seats by the votes of the same colored members who with true rebel gratitude are now repaid with their own expulsion. This circumstance is alluded to in the following protest of the expelled members, written by one of their own number:

"This House having decided by a vote this day to expel the undersigned members from the seats to which they have been legally elected, for no improper conduct on their part, and for no other legal reason or pretended cause except their color, the undersigned ardently desiring the peace of society and the prosperity of the State, and determined to do all in their power to avoid bloodshed or war of races, have decided to suffer wrongs for a time, rather than attempt to redress them in a manner that may, in this time of high political excitement, produce civil strife.

For these considerations, the undersigned will abide by the decision of this House, and will peacefully retire from the seats to which they consider themselves legally entitled. But before doing so, the undersigned, as the representatives of their race, consisting of 500,000 citizens, and over 90,000 legal electors of this State, whose peaceful citizens they are, whose laws they have obeyed, and whose white women and children they supported and protected when their husbands, fathers, and brothers were upon distant battle-fields in the service of the Confederate States, in the name of justice and that equality before the laws to which they are entitled, in the name of peace and humanity, without which anarchy and confusion must take the place of good government, stability, and protection of life and property, and in the name of that friendship and good understanding, which it is their interest and their ardent desire to cultivate with the white race, do hereby enter their solemn protest against the outrage perpetrated upon the race by the action of this House; and they hereby give notice that they will appeal, at the proper time, to the Congress of the United States and the justice of the American people to redress the grievances to which they are subjected by the intolerant and oppressive conduct of the dominant party in this House, who while part of their members were in danger of losing their seats, on account of ineligibility, under the Fourteenth Constitutional Amendment, met the colored members of the House in a spirit of conciliation and kindness during the investigation, but who, when they had obtained an erroneous decision of the House in their favor, which enables them to retain seats to which, under the Constitution of the United States, they are not entitled, on account of their participation in the rebellion, forget that Congress has power, under said Constitutional Amendment, to pass all laws and establish all Courts or Tribunals necessary to carry out said Amendment; and that, by the judgment of such Tribunals, they may yet be compelled to vacate seats illegally held by them, and who now make war on the right of colored members and drive them from the hall. The undersigned respectfully demand that this their protest may be entered upon the journal of the House."

This protest, so just and so temperately worded, ought to have recalled the most hardened rebel to his senses, but characteristically enough, it was refused entry on the journal of the House. But the whole proceeding will do more to enlighten the blacks of the South as to the designs of the Democratic party than volumes of speeches.—Boston Journal.

POLITICAL.—A letter received in Washington from Ex-Governor Cony of Maine, gives assurances that that State will be carried for the Republicans by more than twenty-five thousand majority, notwithstanding the unparalleled efforts put forth by the Democrats.

The Decatur, (Ill.) Democrat speaks in the same sentence of Grant as "the butcher;" and Lee as "our noble old warrior at Richmond."

The New York Express is much opposed to having meetings at such places as John Allen's "dance house" in Water Street. These are Democratic strong hold, and Democratic voters will be spoiled at such meetings. That's what's the matter.

Henry Clay Dean proves to be the originator of Pendleton's plan of repudiation in disguise. Fit parentage.

An Indiana correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says: "Indiana is safe for Baker and Grant, if we have a fair election, by 20,000 majority. She never failed to respond to her duty, nor will she fail now."

The Chicago Tribune says the "Tanners" constitute the most efficient adjunct of the Republican organization at the West. Their drill rooms are filling up with new recruits all the time, and hundreds of young men who will cast their first ballot this fall will be induced to vote for Grant and Colfax by their association with the Tanner clubs of their respective wards.

Hon. Leonard Myers, in a speech at Philadelphia, on the 8th inst. says:

The vilest thing yet is the attempt to fasten on Gen. Grant the responsibility for the starvation of our prisoners, and to do it they call on the rebel Gen. Ould, who even intimates that their prisoners were treated no better. Now I want your attention to a statement which has never before been made public. When Jeff Thompson, the rebel, was exchanged he passed through Andersonville. He had the heart of a man; he had been treated by us with great kindness, and he waited on Jefferson Davis to beg better conduct toward our prisoners. Davis replied: "We can kill them that way much quicker than in battle."

Special Notices.

Missisquoi Springs.

ESSEXBURG, Aug. 29, 1868.
For a long time I had been afflicted with a very serious disease of the Kidneys. I was not able to turn over in bed without help, and it was thought by all my friends that I never should recover. All medical treatment had been without effect. The disease was complicated by a scrofulous affection. I tried every remedy, used the water of Mineral Springs elsewhere without avail. The Missisquoi Spring water was tried by me in 1866, and I continued its use for several months, till I entirely recovered and am now in better health than ever before. I consider this water a specific for Kidney and Scrofulous complaints. It has been so in my case.
ALANSON SAMSON,

VALLEY HOUSE,

Franklin Co., Vt., Aug. 17, '68.

I have been afflicted with Catarrh for three or four years. In February last I had it very severely. In April commenced the use of the Mississippi water. The discharge was very heavy and troublesome, but continued to less on until to-day I am entirely well. The many remedies I had taken under the best medical advice had proved unavailing, and I owe it to others similarly afflicted, to state that the Mississippi water has been, in my case, the only effective means of cure.

How important then to have at hand a certain antidote to all these complaints. Experience proves that this exists in Wistar's Balsam to an extent not found in any other remedy; however severe the suffering, the application of this soothing healing and wonderful Balsam at once vanquishes the disease and restores the sufferer to wonted health.

Gentlemen:—Having for twenty years past been in the habit of using Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry in cases of Croup, Colds, and Pulmonary Affections, I can testify to its great merits with the utmost confidence. I believe it to be the best medicine for these complaints ever used, and have no doubt that the use of it has at three several times saved me from Consumption, besides many times in late years, affording immediate relief in less severe attacks. I am 78 years of age, and for many years have been a subject for pulmonary disease, but by the use of this excellent remedy I keep myself quite comfortable. I can hardly find language to express the exalted opinion I have of the Balsam, and recommend its use to all as the best remedy that can be used. GEORGE DART.

ADDRESS To the Nervous & Debilitated.

WHOSE sufferings have been protracted from hidden causes, and whose cases require prompt treatment to render existence desirable: If you are suffering or have suffered from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urinary organs, or your kidneys, frequently get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky, or frothy, or is itropy on settling? Or does a thick serum rise of the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspnoea? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling upon this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, morose, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eyes as brilliant? The bloom on your cheek as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, self abuse, venereal diseases, badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think of this? I do not mean those fainting swooning, successful business men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid of being unwell in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those fainting swooning, successful business men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? How many men, from badly cured diseases from the effects of self-abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in their organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiotcy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, and almost every other form of disease which humanity is heir to, and the root cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

Diseases of these organs require the use of a BARKTIC. HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT OF BARKTIC is the great standard, and is a certain cure for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Organic Weakness, Female Complaints, General Debility, and all diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity may ensue. Our flesh and blood are supported from these sources, and the health and happiness, and that of Posterity, depend upon the use of a reliable remedy.
